Bhutto to Free Mujibur, Asks Indian Pullout

By Malcolm W. Browne

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan, Jan 3 (NYT).—President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto today told a crowd in Karachi that he intended to "uncon-ditionally" release the imprisoned Bengali leader. Sheikh Mujibur

Mr. Bhutto made the announcement after first putting the question of the sheikh's confinement to a vote by his audience, estimated at more than 100,000. In a manner reminiscent of speeches by Premier Fidel Castro of Cube. Mr. Bhutto said that he was seeking the direct approval of his audience. He said that he

DACCA, Jan. 3 (NYT).-To his fellow reporters on a Bengali-language paper, Chowdhury Mue-enuddin was a pleasant, wellmannered and intelligent young man, handsome, with a neatly-trimmed beard. There was nothing exceptional about him except perhaps that he often received telephone calls from the leader of a right-wing Moslem political

Mr. Mintoff originally ordered British land, sea and air forces to get out of Malta by New Year's Day in the dispute over the rent for the bases. But a hours before this deadline expired he extended it to Jan 15. Nixon Plans GIs in Vietnam Until Hanoi Releases POWs

President Set for 2d Term Bid

By Robert B. Semple Jr. WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (NYT). President Nixon left little doubt last night that he intends to rim for a second term in office; and he said that his present inclina-tion is to keep Vice-President Agnew on the Repoblican ticket

Mr. Nixon refused the opportunity offered by Dan Rather, the Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent who interviewed him on a one-hour television special last night, to announce his candidacy formally.

But he said that he would disclose his decision before Jan. 14, and he conceded later that there was "good reason to think that I might make the decision in that direction" [to run for re-

His endorsement of Mr. Agnew was his strongest in many months, and came amid continuing speculation here that Mr. Nixon may yet select another figure—Secretary of the Treasury John B. Con-nally, for example—to join him on the ticket.

U.S. Force Of 25,000 To 35,000

By Bernard Gwertzman

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 NYT). -President Nixon said last night that the United States would continue to decrease its involvement in Vietnam in coming menths, but he said 25,000 to 35,000 U.S. soldiers would remain until the North Vietnamese released all their American prisoners of war. In an hour-long nationally tele-vised interview with Columbia

Broadcasting System correspon-dent Dan Rather, Mr. Nixon gave what amounted to a long-range view of how he sees the Vietnam war ending. He said the United States still prefers a negotiated settlement through the Paris peace talks, but will continue the process of "Vietnamization" if no negotiated progress is achieved. He said that the heavy bombing of North Vietnam last week was a response to enemy attacks on American reconnaissance planes and a Dec. 19 shelling of Saigon. He said the raids were "very very effective" and, as a result, that he would make later this month another withdrawal announcement to bring the American force level below the 139,000 targeted

22,500 a Month

The rate of withdrawal has been about 22,500 a month since Mr. Nixon began cutting back on American forces from the high of 539,000 in 1969. Mr. Nixon said that "before the first of February, well before the first of February, I will make another withdrawal announcement."

The thinly populated Central on schedule, at least at the present rate, possibly at somewhat a larger rate," he said. This will bring the American troop level in Victuam "to a very low level, well before the [November] election," he said.

But he pledged as the administration has before-not to make a complete withdrawal until North Vietnam agrees to the prisoner release.

"Can the President of the United States, sitting in this office with the responsibility for 1,400 prisoners of war and 1,500 missing in action through Southeast Asia, because they are also potential POWs, can he withdraw all of our forces as long as the enemy holds one American as a prisoner of war?" he asked rhetorically.

"The answer is no," he said. A Bargaining Position

He said that in order to have any bargaining position with the North Vietnamese, "we will have to continue to retain a residual force in Vietnam and we will have to continue the possibility of air strikes on the North Viet-

He said that as the North Vietnamese examine the alternatives, they may decide as they see the American involvement in Vietnam ending, "that it would be well for them not to retain our POWs and run the risk that it would be necessary for the United States to stay in Vietnam."

"Why would having 25,000 or 35,000 as a residual force have any effect?" he said. "And the answer is, does the enemy want tha United States to withdraw from Vietnam, or doesn't it?" He said that he had probed (Continued on Page 2. Col. 3)

VIENTIANE, Jan. 3 (Reuters).

-North Vietnamese gunners to-day continued to shell the big U.S.-backed guerrilla base of Long Cheng, which is in serious danger of being overrun, military sources said today.

The sources said there was a direct threat that an estimated 8,000 Communist troops near Long Cheng, 80 miles northeast o Vientiane, would launch a ground attack on the headquarters of Gen. Vang Pao's Meo guerrilla

All infantry troops inside the bate had been redeployed in nearby villages and hill positions, leaving only auxiliary units in Long Cheng itself.

The sources disclosed that during the initial artillery barrage on Long Cheng last Friday, the North Vietnamese destroyed the entire ammunition dump for the Second Military Region of Laos. Base Is Resupplied

Although the base has since been resupplied, big American aircraft have begun to find it extremely difficult to land at the base as the Communists have heen able to fire accurately on the runway, which has been damaged but is still usable. Only helicopters could land and take off with relative safety.

American air intervention has been effective in many areas near Long Cheng, although it has not silenced the 120-mm guns, which have a range of 15 miles. Also, the North Vietnamese move their gun positions almost hourly, according to the sources Meanwhile, counting of votes from yesterday's general election

This is a "fable," the statement said.

It added that had Mr. Nixon abided by the Communists' seven-point peace plan of July 1, the American prisoners, would have been able to return home before Dec. 31.

'Rhetoric' Downplayed He said his own objective had been to downplay "rhetoric" and concentrate on delivering on the promises he had made already in order to restore national "confidence" in the institution of the presidency itself. At the end of the interview Mr. Nixon said that it was possible

 Neither Chinese nor American leaders expect formal diplomatic recognition to result from his week-long trip beginning Feb. 21, because of continued U.S. support for the Nationalist Chinese regime on Taiwan. But we will have normalization in terms of setting up some method of communication better than we currently have," he said. He said that what made a summit possible was last September's Rig Four agreement on Berlin. "That historic agreement," he said, raised the possibility of further accord in areas where "our interests might run in conflict-possibly the Mideast, possibly arms limitation, certaintrade and other areas."

The positive way in which he referred to the Moscow summit indicated that Mr. Nixon was not letting his ire at Soviet support of India in the recent war with Pakistan stand in the way of his Moscow trip. Soviet Arms Shipments

Asked about reports that the United States had decided to give Israel its requested Phantom jet bombers, he indicated the reports were accurate when he said that the United States would not allow the military balance in the Middle East to shift, and that the Soviet Union had recently been making "very significant" arms shipments to Egypt. "We have made a commitment in principle," he said. But he said that there was no sign that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro "will recede one inch from his determination of exporting Castro-type revolution all over the hemisphere." He said Mr. Castro has made a "basket case"

Cuba's economy. Bars Granting Amnesty

The President also said that he would not grant amnesty to Americans who have refused to serve in Vietnam, but he held out the possibility that there would be a "liberal" amnesty policy at a time when there were no Americans in Southeast Asia. Several members of Congress have proposed in recent weeks that men who left the country to avoid serving in the armed forces should be granted amnesty if they agreed to serve a period

"As long as there are Ameri-

"As long as there are any POWs held by the North Viet-namese, there will be no amnesty," the President continued. But he went on to say that "we always, under our system, provide for amnesty" and de-clared that if Americans were no longer fighting and if there were no prisoners of war, "I for one would be very liberal with regard to amnesty." Amnesty would "have to be on a basis of their, of course, paying the price that anyone should pay for violating the law," he con-

The newspaper, quoting Iranians arriving at the border town of Khosrowi, said the Iraqi police had opened fire during demonstrations in Karbala, Najai and Kadhimain against the expulsion and treatment of religious leaders and theology students.

The Tehran radio reported today that the number of recent Iranian deportees has exceeded 60,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (UPI). A group of supporters of President Nixon took the first move to formalize his all-but-announccandidacy for a second term entering him today in New Hampshire's March 7 primary. Mr. Nixon said last night that he would make known his deci-

Sen. Vance Hartke, D., Ind., also announced today, as ex-pected, that he was entering the New Hampshire Democratic primary, while conservative Rep. John M. Ashbrook, R., Ohio, said that he was getting the necessary signatures to file against the President in the GOP race. Liberal Rep. Panl N. McCloskey, R. Calif., already has filed.

Sen, Hartke made his announcement at the spot in Manchester where 12 years ago John F. Kennedy announced that he would run for president.

Speaking to newsmen in the lobby of the Sheraton-Carpenter Hotel, Sen. Hartke said: "The American people and the world cannot afford four more years of Richard Nixon's failures." . He said that the American people "descrive something better than half measures grounded on half truths, diplicity, confusion and decelt." The time has come to stop insulting our national intelligence," he said.

Rep. Ashbrook, who last week accused Mr. Nixon of failure to follow through on pledges to conservatives, said that he had half the signatures needed to get on the New Hampshire ballot and had raised enough money for a strong campaign.

"If Jackson were leading going into the convention, it would not influence me to reconsider my position," Sen. Kennedy said in a telephone interview from Sun Valley, Idaho, where he was on vacation. "I would not be a candidate to head off Jackson. That wouldn't bring me into it."

This movement by Sen. Kennedy away from a more active political role in 1972 reinforces the widespread belief among Dem-ocratic leaders that he will not seek the nomination. But it does not eliminate the possibility that the senator could be drafted in the event of a convention dead-lock next July.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (NYT).-Although still an experimental drug not yet approved by the Food and Drug Administration, the use of methadone to treat heroin addiction has grown dramatically over the last six years -from a handful of patients to scores of programs in dozens of cities across the country.

The reason is the strong public pressure to "do something" about

Mayor John V. Lindsay responded to that pressura recently by announcing that New York City will put most of its drug treatment eggs into the methadone basket, more than tripling the present 3,000-patient methadona maintenance program in the

Despite its increasing acceptance, methadone remains highly controversial. While the medical consensus is that it can be helpful for some heroin addicts when given in programs that also offer rehabilitation services, it is clear from the experience of many programs that methadone is not the whole answer. Heroin addicts are a diverse group and there are many for whom methadone does not work.

One objection to methadone programs is that rather than curing addiction, they simply substitute for the illegal heroin a legal drug—itself an addicting narcotic—on which the addict re-mains dependent. Methadone blocks the painful symptoms of heroin withdrawal but in proper doses does not produce a "high."

Easier to Quit

Methadone backers counter that it is easier to taper off methadone than heroin and that every day an addict is on metha-done is a day in which he does not need to steal to buy heroin. In the better programs it is also a day in which the addict has time to participate in rehabilitation efforts. Another objection is that in programs not rigidly controlled, young heroin users who are not yet solidly hooked may needlessly be put on methadone and addict-ed to their "cure." Hasty efforts to bring the substitute drug to all addicts without rehabilitation services, it is felt, may help little and harm more. Recently, for example, the Journal of the American Medical Association published a report illustrating that a quickly set up and poorly run mathadone program in Washington, D.C., had failed to diminish the heroin usage of many of its clients and that many, instead of using the drug themselves, were selling it on the street. Methadooe is used by some addicts to tide themselves over when they are unable to get heroin. In New York, Mayor Lindsay's planned expansion of the methadone program was criticized by Howard A. Jones, chairman of the State Narcotic Addiction Control Commission. He favored only a "cautious expansion" of maintenance programs and opposed the use of the synthetic narcotic for any length of time. "It's so close to a surrender to the problem," he said.

Antagonists Studied

Mr. Jones said he hoped that progress would soon be made in the development of so-called "heroin antagonists." which block the euphoria associated with the drug over prolonged periods.

Indeed, because methadone is only partly successful, attention is turning more and more to the heroin antagonists. These drugs not only chemically prevent the body from responding to heroin but, unlike methadone, are nonaddictive. The antagonists have been known since the 1950s but only in recent years have drug companies begun to develop their potential. The two best-known experimental antagonists are cyclarocine and naloxone. When injected into the body, the antagonist molecules are believed to attach

Final Planning Task Of 31 Americans

PEKING, Jan. 3 (Reuters) -An American advance party flew into Peking today to make final preparations for President

Nixon's visit next month. The 31 Americans, headed by Brig. Gen. Alexander Haig. Mr. Nixon's deputy national security adviser, and including presidential press secretary Ron Ziegler, were driven to Peking's Great Hall of the People, where state guests are normally entertained. Gen. Haig is authorized to handle any substantive aspects of the President's visit. His discussions will be much more technical than those beld by Mr. Nixon's chief security adviser, Henry Kissinger, on his second trip bere last October.

Press arrangements for Mr Nixon's visit and the possibility of live television coverage will be among the subjects discussed with officials here during the American delegation's stay, which is expected to last for at least

Observers note that both sides may want to discuss Vietnam. China may wish to raise the question of the renewed U.S. bombing of North Vietnam late last month.

Preliminary Contact

Gen. Haig may have been asked to make preliminary contact over American prisoners of war in North Vietnam. Mr. Nixon said in a television interview yesterday that he would raise the subject with the Chinese leaders if no progress had been made with Hanoi before his China trip.

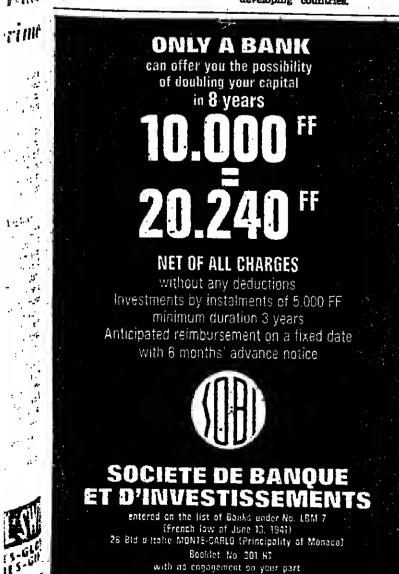

The U.S. presidential Boeing-707, which brought the Americans here, was delayed by Peking's first snow of the year.

When it arrived, the aircraft bearing the words "United States of America"-taxied right up to the airport terminal and halted beneath a giant portrait of Mao Tse-tung.

Framing the aircraft in the background were posters say-ing "Long Live the Great Leader Chairman Mao" and "Long Live the Great Communist Party of China."

During Mr. Kissinger's visit his plane remained parked throughout, far away from the

Quadrennial Talkathon

The 1972 presidential campaign began long before the year was ushered in-in many respects, it has been going on since the ballots were counted in 1968. But President Nixon's long, and quite effective, television interview Sunday evening can be taken as the starting gun for the penultimate lap of the race to the White House; the last dash will come after the summer conventions.

Mr. Nixon left many openings for argument, especially about Vietnam, and his treatment of domestie matters was cursory. But he did give another illustration of his ability to handle questioning well, and it was quite clear that his new departures in foreign affairs will loom very large in his campaign—if he runs again, which there seems very little reason to doubt. It was symptomatic, however, of the manner in which the voting next November dominates so much of American thinking that he had to deal with questions implying that his timing in these ventures was influenced by electioneering considerations. The same issue has been raised concerning his economic pro-

The manner in which the quadrennial talkathon of a presidential election looms over policies and politics during the fouryear presidential term has produced in the Senate a proposal for a constitutional amendment limiting each President to a single, six-year term. The three elections that voted Franklin D. Roosevelt into the presidency did produce an amendment restricting a President to two consecutive four-year terms. But to abolish, constitutionally, the accountability of a President after four years would seem a dangerous and impracticable innova-

Among those who contest the proposed single term is James C. Hagerty, once President Eisenhower's press secretary and now vice-president of the American Broadcasting Company. Mr. Hagerty argues strongly that the political process prevailing under the present system is important in securing legislation and effective executive action, as well as in maintaining a reasonable balance of political forces, without either concentrating power too strongly in a single group, or splitting the nation into a number of seets

Americans, with so long a tradition of peaceful transmission of power, do not often think of possible breaches in that tradition. But the constitution of the Second French Republic paved the way for Louis Napoleon's accession to the throne by limiting him, as president, to a single term. Alexis de Tocqueville, a shrewd political analyst, regarded his own support for a single presidential term in the committee for the constitution following Louis Philippe's downfall in 1848 as "my most vexatious memory from that time." Well aware of how the powers of the presidency could be used to secure re-election, he overlooked the fact that if the people wanted a man to continue in that office, the constitution would not stop them-and dictatorship might then result.

In any case, the 1972 campaign is well launched, and before the flood of words, charges and political maneuvering sweeps over the nation, it is worth bearing in mind that the evils of a campaign year are far better than no campaign at all. It is better for a President to do the right thing to win votes than anything, good or bad, because he has no concern for the voting.

Restoring Allied Unity

What happened at the Nixon-Brandt summit in Key Biscayne was not nearly as important as what didn't happen: a planned meeting between Treasury Secretary Connally and West German Finance Minister Schiller. The absence of Mr. Connally—whose tactics for four months heated up America's relations with its chief allies abroad-confirmed a turn away from go-it-alone policies by the United States.

Mr. Nixon signaled that intention when he scheduled summit meetings with Canada, France, Britain, West Germany and Japan within the space of a month. The basic deal to resolve the world currency and trade meeting by abandoning exaggerated American trade demands and agreeing to devalue the dollar in terms of gold. But even after this deal was fleshed out at the later Group of Ten meeting in Washington, Treasury officials there insisted that Congress would not confirm it by raising the gold price until further trade concessions of major importance were made by the six Common Market countries, particularly in agriculture. Mr. Nixon now has reduced this issue to its proper importance.

The key to the biggest agriculture issue between the United States and the Common Market is Europe's grain price, which legally should be revised upward now as a result of the recent currency realignment. West Germany's farmers are the main pressure group for higher prices, which in turn will spur higher European production and reduce imports of American grain. Mr. Nixon recognized the political sensitivity of the issue for Mr. Brandt by dealing Mr. Connally out and leaving negotiation to the talks being conducted in Brussels by the new United States trade representative, William Eberle,

Instead of striking an attitude hostile to the Common Market and renewing recent hints that its extension to Britain might be contrary to American interests, Mr. Nixon reaffirmed the "close partnership" he seeks between the United States and a uniting West Europe. He favored in principle Mr. Brandt's idea of moving toward institutional links between the United States and the Common Market.

West German uneasiness over Mr. Nixon's projected Moscow trip was soothed by pledges not to strike a separate bargain there on troop reductions in Europe or on other issues affecting NATO. The American commitment to NATO was emphasized, upgrading the U.S. representative through the appointment of ex-Treasury Secretary David Kennedy to the

Mr. Brandt, who spent 16 hours with Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev in the Crimea in September, was in a position to brief Mr. Nixon on the Kremlin's new master. Mr. Nixon's May Moscow visit, in turn, undoubtedly will help Mr. Brandt overcome domestic opposition to his new West German-Soviet treaty, which should then be in the final stages of a Bundestag ratification fight. Its approval would clear the way for Soviet implementation of the new fourpower accords on Berlin.

One more allied summit lies ahead for Mr. Nixon, that with Premier Sato of Japan next week. Then, having consulted his chief allies and liquidated the world monetary crisis, the President will be in better position to speak again as leader of the free world alliance when he meets at the summit with Mao Tsetung next month and Mr. Brezhnev three

International Opinion

Mintoff Went Too Far

There is little doubt that the government is right. The essential point is that Mr. Mintoff was asking for more than the base (which is at most no more than an inessential convenience) is worth to Britain. This is known to be the judgment of former Labor Defense Secretary Denis Healey as well as that of the present government and its advisers and there is no reason to dissent from it.

The British government is bound to be a little uncomiortable (and even Mintoff may be) at the prospect that the Russians might ease themselves into the vacuum. Yet, even if the Russians, who are already firmly based in the Mediterranean, were to establish themselves in Maita, it would have for them no more than a marginal prestige value. It is of course sad that the British-Malta connection should end like this-if, indeed, it is ending, which is not absolutely certain.

Malta itself may be the chief sufferer, at least materially. But it would have been out of the question for Britain to interfere in Malta's politics to save the Maltese from themselves or their mercurial prime minister-and even more absurd to pay more than the base is worth.

-Richard M. Nixon,

April 7, 1971.

LONDON. - The bombs that fell on North Vietnam for five days after Christmas carried a message as significant to the American people as the Victnamese. For the message, properly understood, dissolved a number of illusions Americans have had about President Nixon'e policy in Indochina.

The fliusion, laboriously constructed by the President, is that American forces must remain in South Vietnam because the enemy holds American prisoners. The truth is the opposite: The prisoners are useful under the Nixon policy to help justify a residual American force.

The illusion has it that bombing is necessary to protect the emaining American forces South Vietnam. The truth is now seen to be the opposite: A to provide a reason for continued bombing.

No End Seen

The illusion is that American responsibility for life and death in Indochina is slowly coming to an end. The truth is that the Nixon policy makes it impossible to see the end of American in-

Those conclusions are painful. but they are not just bitter paradox. They follow remoraclesspeople are beginning to understand is Nixon's purpose in Vietnam: to end the combat role of American ground forces but win the war by other means.

That is why a commitment to massive continuing use of American air power has really been implicit all along in the Nixon withdrawal program. Without bombing and close support by American planes, the Thieu gov-ernment in Saigon would have little chance of surviving. And its survival is now, unambiguously, why we are in Victuam: The talk of stopping China and advancing democracy has been

The South Vietnamess can take over some of the functions now carried out by American planes and pilots. But there is no realistic chance of their developing the capacity to bomb Laos and Cambodia and North Vietnam as we have, to cut the flow of enemy supplies, or for that matter of our giving them the necessary aircraft to do so.

How, then, can we expect Saigan to win the war?

One theory is that we can scare the enemy into giving up, by the threat of such bombing assaults as the one just completed. Ac-Kissinger's hope—that can be driven to making a deal at the Parks peace talks, to accepting the Thieu govern-

Old Mirage

But that is the same old mirage that Lyndon Johnson and Dean Rusk chased so long and so disastrously. They could not believe that, in the end, the immense power of the United States could be resisted by a tiny underdeveloped country like North Vietnam. But it could, as those who understood the extraordinary Vietnamere psychology had always warned. Why should Eanoi's will break now when it did not under endless months of heavier bombing?

seemed to point toward the inevitability of a total U.S. withdrawal.

What if the public begins to see that no end is in sight? What if those hombers go north again, every few months, to attack another reported enemy buildup? What if more planes are lost, and more pilots made prisoner?

Permanent

Barring some diplomatic Deus ex machina, that is the message of Richard Nixon's post-Christmas bombing: The United States will continue to have the air role in what The Economist Loudon, a strong supporter of the war, has just called "a permanent holding position in

There may be some doubt that the people who live in Indochina would welcome that result: it and Cambodia as well as Vietnam. Even assuming the merits of the Thien government, is it worth that cost?

But the more immediate question is what Americans want. Will they be prepared to face the fact that on the next inaugural day in Washington, and two years from now, and four, there will still be an American war in In-

GEORGETOWN, Guyana bring down the government of Chinese to the Caribbean is about to begin.

The last time they were brought as underpaid and overworked coolies by English planters after the African slaves were emancipated in 1834. Along with the more numerous, similarly in-dentured laborers from India and Pakistan the Chinese came for the backbreaking job of cutting and harvesting the region's predominant crop, sugar. Their migration ended only with World

This time the Chinese are coming because they want to and chances are good that they will have far more impact than the first time. Today, while there are Chinese shopkeepers, merchants, restaurateurs and farmers in Trinidad, Cuba and Jamaica, the largest colony probably is in Guyana, which, until its independence in 1966, had been known as British Guiana. Nearly the size of the state of Minnesota, Guyana rests on the northeast shoulder of South America, largely undeveloped and sparsely settled. Out of a population of 720,000, about 50,000 are of Chinese ancestry— most notably its president, Frank

Logical Land

Perhaps because of this, China chose Guyana as a logical land for negotiating the first bilateral trade agreement in the Caribbean area. It calls for $15 million of trade each way over the next five years on a quid pro quo basis, with China providing one or two textile plants as a starter and Guyana shipping alumina ore, timber and possibly sugar.

But the deal has deeper meanings for both countries. While exercising a policy that is patently cautions, as it has during the Indo-Pakistani war over Bangladesh, China is confronting both the Soviet Union and the United States in Guyana. In a parallel ploy, Guyana is impudently turning away from the United States in hope of becoming an economic model for the Third World" and the political leader in the Caribbean. Neither strategy, it appears, involves real brinkmanship. Earlier this month, after Guyana's energetic and able Prime Minister Forbes Burnham revealed his new deal with China, variously described as a protocol and "agreement in principle," one of his closest aides, Christopher Nascimento, taunted a U.S. Embasey official here by asking:

"Aren't you chaps worried about our approach to China?" The official embassy line is that Burnham hopes to worry Washington into coming up with more aid. "We've grown up," saye an embassy source. "We are more sophisticated and can abide China's presence down here."

m's arch political rival. Cheddi Jagan, however, sees it as a dark and devious plot hatched in Washington. In a parliamentary debate last week and in a lengthy interview the next morning, Jagan insisted that he did not oppose dealings with Peking but that it is a subterfuge "to drive another wedge between China and the Soviet Union,"

Jagan believes the State Department's Central Intelligence Agency is etill manipulating Guyana'e affairs. He has good reason for his opinion.

Defends Actions

In defense of his actions Burnham argued that it would not be in the best self-interest of the United States to suspend aid to Guyana because that would make his nation even more reliant on China at a critical time when all superpowers are using economic trade and aid to influence world events.

Worse yet, according to Burnham's view, it would appear as if the U.S. is abandoning the Third World.

Prayda Assails 'Farce' MOSCOW, Jan. 3 (Reuters).-The U.S. decision to resume delivery of Phantom fighterbombers to Israel was "the end of a farce," the Soviet Communist party newspaper, Pravda, said

The newspaper blamed Israel and the United States for the continuing crisis in the Middle East, but made no mention of Soviet arms deliveries to Egypt. The real reason for the U.S. decision was the "tremendous influence" of Zionist circles on the government, "as the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram has rightly pointed out," Prayda added.

The Social Democratic party was the hig winner in the election for the 200-member unicameral Eduskunta (parliament), winning at least three ceats and increasing its mandate from 52 to 55, according to official, but not final results.

The Communist-dominated People's Democratic League also made gains, increasing its representation from 36 to 37. Another big winner in the election was the Christian League, which may increase its represen tation from one seat to five. The losers in the election were the conservative National Coalition party, which according to preliminary results will lose three seats, from 37 to 34, and the Canter party, which will lose a still undetermined number of seats. It held 36 seats in the outgoing parliament, but cooperated with other middle-of-the-road parties in various election districts. Other losers were the minor parties, the Liberal People's party, the Swedish People's party and the Rural party, still further weakening the center party groupings in Finnish politics.

German Allegedly Confesses Kidnap Role;Ransom Missing

Heinz Joachim Ollenburg, a 47rear-old lawyer arrested in Mexico Thursday, has admitted taking part in the kidnapping of in West Germany because he did not want to be hunted all over the world, he allegedly said.
He was said to have admitted having shocked Mr. Albrecht with German multimillionaire Theo Albrecht, a state prosecutor announced today.

But the whereabouts of a record seven million marks of ransom money remained a mystery. Chief prosecutor Gert Lindenberg told a news conference that Mr. Ollenburg said he had been forced to get rid of his share of the ransom because someone had followed him when he tried to cache the loot. That was "very painful," Mr.

Ollenburg was quoted as saying. The arrest of Paul Kron, 39. an ex-convict, led to the arrest of Mr. Ollenburg. Kron, arrested Dec. 21 after allegedly paying a debt with 500-mark notes found to be part of the ransom money, told police Wednesday that he and Mr. Ollenburg had kidnapped Mr. Albrecht. Mr. Ollenburg masterminded

Albrecht was released.

Mr. Ollenburg spent 100,000 marks of his share of the ransom for "urgent obligations," Mr. Lindenberg said, Mr. Lindenberg said that he did not know where the money went, but that he hoped to trace it through the serial numbers of the bills.

Kron and Mr. Ollenburg each said he had given the other his weapons, police said. Kron said the pistols, reputedly of 9-mm and 7.65-mm, were obtained in Mr. Ollenburg report dly said he had continued his daily business at his office in Duesseldorf after the release of Mr. Albrecht. Mr. Albrecht has identified Mr. Ollenburg's office as his place of confinement during his 18-day sequestration. Mr. Ollenburg reportedly said

Coming to Grips With 'Billy Budd'

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, Jan 3 (IBT) -Conductor and cast do rather better by Benjamin Britten in the hew Covers Garden revival of "Billy Budd" than British and his librestiate do by them.

The opera, now 20 years old, has never been as popular as "Peter Grimes" and it probably never will be. The stury by K.M. Forster and Eric Croxler, cut on Herman Melville, is pretty hard to take and in its setting Britten's usually acute gense of profilection seems to have deserted him.

That he simusely has been aware of this may be inferred from the fact that in a 1961 revision he compressed the original four acts into two. He didn't cut enough. In the present version the first act runs to an hour and 20 minutes, the accord to an hour and 10. They are too long, And it is not just a question of overall length. Each individ-ual episode is too long. In "Billy Budd" Britten exhibits a Bruckneresque, and quite uncharacter-istic, predilection for crashing red lights.

The falling would not be so troublesome had he written as begulingly for his singers as he has written for his orchestra. The instrumental writing may be rated among his finest accomplishments, and this would account for the high esteem in which the opera has been held by those who think of opera primarily in orchestral terms. Even they, as reviews in the London papers demonstrated, have their misgivings about the book with its tale of a young seaman, an epitome of innocent goodness, framed by an envious master-at-arms, the epitome of evil, and allowed to be hanged for striking—and killing at one blow—his tormenter by a benevolent captain within whose power it lay to save him. The character simply will not come to life.

Billy Budd has been described as a kind of marine Siegfried, or Parsifal. To an American he seems, especially as made up and played by Peter Glossop, rather closer to Lil Abner. The master-atarms has been seen as a counterpart of lago, complete with a lengthy "credo." Lacking lago's subtlety, he seems, as sung by Forbes Robinson, closer to Pizarro. And the captain's passivity in the moment of crisis, as portrayed by Richard Lewis, costs him our sympathy. Billy Budd, characteristically, blesses him as he is led off to be hanged. It may be doubted that anyone in the audience does.

Still, there is the wonderful writing for the orchestra, eloquently realized by Charles Mackerras and the Royal Opera House Orchestra, It compensates for the stilted setting of an oppressively pedestrian text. And the second act offers a naval battle, or at least a salvo, a killing, a drumhead court-martial, and a hanging. It should be enough, but it isn't. What it lacks is tension, Just as, in the naval encounter, the battle is never joined, so in the opera Britten and his librettists have nelther identified nor come to grips with the problem.

Slips of the Tongue and Avocados By Waverley Root huiti, testicle tree. Dictionaries PARIS (IHT) -Avocado is a word which can be articulated without difficulty today, but it arrived at its present pronounce-able state through a series of distortions in various languages. It was thus modified into acuicate or avoka in the Caribbean, aguacate in Spanish, and abacate in Portuguese. In Peru and points south, the question was begged by substituting for the classic name the popular one of patta.

The most elaborate evasion occurred when this fruit-vegetable was baptized the alligator pear, a name often used for it in Florida, and explained there as resulting from the circumstance that it grows in areas also inhabited by alligators, whose scaly hide, moreover, is suggested by the rough skin of certain varieties of avocado. Actually this name antedates the arrival of the avocado tree in Florida, having first appeared in English-speaking Jamaica, the child of folk etymology (substitution of a familiar word for an unfamiliar one) and sound etymology (replacement of a word difficult to pronounce or understand by a common one which resembles it.)

The reason the original name of the avocado caused so much difficulty for the Europeans . who discovered it in tropical America was that it belonged to a language completely alien to theirs— Nahuatl, an Astec topque. "Avocado" in Nahuati was ahua-explain this name as a reference to the aphrodistac qualities of the fruit. The truth is probably just the other way around. The avocado gained its vague reputation for being approdisisc (which it is not), because of its appearance on the tree, especially as it tends to group its fruits among its shiny leaves so that it seems often to be growing in pairs. Mexico

The avocado (scientific name Persea omericanus) is in all pro-bability a native of Mexico, whose original range extended as far south as the Andean region of what is now Colombia and perhaps into Venezuela as well. Many experts describe it as a native of Peru, misled, perhaps, by the fact that it was in Peru that the Spanish conquistadores first encountered it, and add for good measure that it has been cultivated there for thousands of years. This is in contradiction with the testimony of Garcilaso de la Vega, son of a Spanish conquistador and an Incan princess, who wrote that the avocado was brought from Ecuador into the warm valleys near Cuzco by the Inca Tupac Yupanqui, which would make it in the 15th century, only shortly before the Spaniards arrived themselves The first person to describe the avocado was Martin Fernandez de Enciso, who saw it growing near Sente Marts, Colombia, when he was exploring the coast with one of the first Spanish expeditions to mainland America; he wrote of it in his "Suma de Geografia" in 1519. Seven years later Gonzalo Fernandez de Oviedo fruit but no one showed any interest in importing it or eating it for another 500 years. Although on its native ground and in other -Latin American tropical and sub-tropical regions to which it had spread, the avo-cado was a cheap staple food (it is still inexpensive enough in several Latin American countries to be an everyday dish), it did not penetrate the United States until the 20th century. Until then, an occasional avocado might appear as a rare and costly luxury until about 1900, when Florida fruit growers interested them-selves in it. A flourishing industry developed there, with Call-fornia swiftly following suit. Europe remained uninterested.

In 1938, tha Larousse gastronomic encyclopedia noted sniffily that the avocado was a fruit appreciated by Americans; and late as 1962 the "Dictionnaire de l'Académie des Gastronomes was still listing it as a food eaten only by Americans. In 1960 the avocado in France, as in the United States of 1900, was still encountered only rarely in iuxury restaurants, at fancy prices. Its acceptance in France and Europe in the last few years was perhaps largely the result of the effective marketing methods of Israel, which has now become the world's third largest exporter of this fruit, after California and South Afri-

There are three basic varieties of avocado, already recognized and described as early as 1653 by Fray Bernabe Cobo (Spanish colonizers showed more interest in the fruit than Spanish gourmets.) The so-called West Indian avocado is the most distinctly tropical; the only place it will grow in the United States is southern Florida, and this is, in fact, the variety grown there. The Gustemalan avocado, strain which developed in the unlands of that Central American country, has a thick woody skin and can survive somewhat lower temperatures than the West Indian variety, but not frost. The Mexican, the presumed ancestor of the others, is the hardiest of all (but cannot tolerate more frost than the orange), and is the variety preferred

The avocado is nourishing, containing in some varieties up to 25 percent of fats in the form of oil important amounts of starch and about 2 percent protein. In contrest to most fruits, it has no appreciable amount of sugar or acid. Which is what gives it, from the exter's point of view, the qualifies of a vegetable rather than of a fruit.

one of the world's top ten advertising agency groups, wants a man to fill an important job in its coordinating bureau in Brussels.

MARKETING & ADVERTISING PROJECT COORDINATOR

The man we want will probably have had experience in agency account handling, or in the brand management area of a sophisticated consumer goods marketer.

He must have a highly developed sense of organisa-tion, and the ability to work effectively without day-to-day supervision, satisfying needs and requirements on some of the world's most famous and aggressive marketing accounts.

He must have the personality to enable him to relate comiortably to a wide variety of people and problems, and the talent to communicate clearly, both orally and in writing, in these circumstances.

He will probably be of European or British nationality, in his mid-to-late twentles, totally fluent in English, and with a knowledge of one or more European languages. Moderate travel moy be required from Brussels, which will be his headquarters, and which is generally considered to be one of the most attractive European capitals from a tax standpoint. We believe this to be one of the more interesting and

Women: 'Poor...Abominable' By Dennis Stern

NEW YORK (AP).—The per-formance of the male-dominated judiciary in handling sex discrimination cases ranges from "poor to abominable," according to an analysis by two lew professors of court opinions written since the 1870s.

Moreover, there is little indication that the trend of sex discrimination by law will be reversed, despite recent efforts by feminists. The study, believed to be the first to examine the attitudes shaping judicial opinions on sex discrimination, was written by Prof. John D. Johnston jr. and Prof. Charles L. Knapp and appears in the current issue of the New York University Law Review. After analyzing many state and federal cases decided in the last 100 years, Mr. Johnston and Mr. Knapp, professors at NYU Law School, conclude that—"with some notable exceptions"—judges over the years have "failed to bring to sex discrimination cases those judicial virtues of detachment, reflection and critical analysis which have served them so well with respect to other sensitive social issues." Instead, the authors assert, the courts have historically demonstrated the belief "that women are-and ought to be-confined to the social roles of homemaker, wife and mother, and gainfully employed if at all only in endeavors which comport with their assumed subservient, child-oriented and decorative characteristics." The professors do not place the spectrum: discrimination against women practicing law, inaccess to public accommodation, job qualification, jury duty, public education and criminal sentencing. An 1873 U.S. Supreme Court case, upholding an Illinois ruling that barred a woman from practicing law because she was a female, is cited by the authors as setting an example of judicial discrimination apparently followed during the next 100 years. Justice Joseph P. Bradley wrote: "The paramount destiny and mission of women are to fulfill the noble and benign offices of wife and mother. This is the law of the Creator . . . It is within the province of the legislature to ordain what offices, positions and callings shall receive the benefit of those energies and responsi-bilities . . which are presumed to predominate in the sterner Similarly, the Mississippi Supreme Court in 1966 upheld a state statute that excluded women from juries, writing: "The legislature has the right to exclude women so they may continue their service as mothers. wives and homemakers, and also to protect them (in some areas they are still upon a pedestal) from the filth, obscenity and noxious atmosphere that so often pervades a courtroom during a jury trial."

The professors noted that some holdings by state and lower federal courts in the last decade have finally guaranteed women the same rights as men, but they also observed that at the same time many "opinions continue to apjustices have been caused by the pear in which both the results "discriminatory enactments" of and the reasoning are virtually male-dominated state legislatures. indistinguishable from those issu-

Tokyo Asked To Speed Up Ketorm Plan

TOKYO, Jan. 3 (AP-DJ).--Japan should "speed up its capi-tal liberalization programs, re-move more import restrictions and open a wider area of its domestic market to American industries," Konosuke Matsushita chairman of Matsushita Electric Co., was quoted as saying today in an article in the Japan Times.

The English-language newspaper also quoted Mr. Matsushita as saying that "Japan should keep an even balance of trade with the United States instead of being preoccupied with increasing its exports to the American market."

At the same time, he said, Japan "must persuade the United States and other countries to allow us to do enough export business" so Japan may earn enough to buy raw materials.

Mr. Matsushita said he thought some of his fellow businessmen are over-arxious about the China "Some people talk as if golden

 Russia is the world's largest. sugar producer—some 9.5 mil-Hon tons a year. Like the United States, the Soviet Union need not import sugar, but does so for largely political reasons:

The Soviets have been taking about three million tons of Cuban cane sugar each year in part pay-ment for their heavy support of that island's government.

• The Russians have regularly sold the unneeded Cuban sugar for hard currencies, often at less than world market prices. Far smaller purchases of 10 or 20 thousand tons from Brazil and other Latin American countries made in the past have usually been disposed of in a similar fashion.

 Political experts here are fascinated by the possibility that Moscow does indeed need sugar and that Cuba's production may be less than the 6.5 million tons announced last year.

If so, the experts believe that other Soviet crops may he in trouble because of adverse climatic or other conditions. Sugar beets usually thrive in areas unsuitable for grains and other Browtps.

Cuban Question One European political scientist here observed that Cuba's traditional sugar harvest starts on New Year's Day, and that the combination of a poor crop forecast there and in the Soviet Union may have prompted the Russians to quickly purchase Brazilian sup-

Only about 15 percent of world sugar output enters the international commodities markets, it was noted, and any slight decrease in production can raise prices dramatically.

However, some political observers tend to think that the purchase reflects Moscow's desire to enter the vacuum in Latin-America created by Washington's "low profile policy" in the region.

The Chinese are also trying to cultivate friends in the area. In recent weeks, Peking has announced plans to set up permanent trade missions in Guyana, Peru and expand the one in Chile, teams with a number of other Latin American countries.

Bruce Netschert and Charles Frazier, of the National Economic Research Associates, have recently completed such a study. They concluded:

"A bost of complex questions must be answered before any real assessment can be advanced. Where will the 40 tankers, costing $3 billion, be constructed? And how financed? Who will construct and finance the billiondollar liquefied natural gas plant? What will the FOB price he? Truly, it is a mind-blowing venture which could more than match the duration of the Viet-nam peace negotiations and the SALT talks in its period of

Gigantic Reserves But the facts they uncovered-many of which verified those of the Sept. 27 issue of the Oil and Gas Journal-were startling. For example, Soviet government fig-ures listed proved reserves in 1971 as more than 565 billion cubic feet, or more than twice the United States' reserves. That represented 80 times the present production of natural gas in the Soviet Union.

The Ministry of Gas estimated that the indicated potential reserves of the U.S.S.R. including eastern Siberia, in which there has been almost no exploration is "on the order of 3,000 billion cubic feet." Soviet gas industry spokesmen expect to be produc ing beetwen 35 billion and 70 billion cubic feet by the year 2000.

Mr. Neischert and Mr. Frazier pointed out that the true significance of these figures lay not so much in their magnitude as in the nature of the resource occurrence. They explained:

"The Soviet Union appears to be the native habitat of giant gas fields. The larger the field, the greater its deliverability and longer its life. Giant fields are commonly defined as those with over 1,000 billion cubic feet or more. There are at least 34 fields in the U.S.S.R. with over 3,000 billion cubic feet each. At least half a dozen of these must be termed super glants, with erves measured in the scores

There is, finally, the monster Urengoiskoye, which reaches the incredible size of 123,000 billion or 141,000 billion cubic feet, depending on which Soviet figures you read."

Siberian Deposits They noted that the super giant fields are generally found in Tyumen province in northwestern Siberia, whose reserves alone exceed those of the entire United States.

The Russians have reported the discovery in Siberia of "solid gas" deposits in the permafrost where it measures 2,500 feet in thickness and the gas combines with water under high preasure to form a hydrate. According to Russian estimates, there are more than 500,000 billion cubic feet of solid gas in the Soviet Arctic.

Any agreement with the Soviet Union would naturally have to take into consideration problems of national security and the potential interruption of supplies because of political differences. But Mr. Netschert and Mr.

Frazier argued that it was "un likely that more than a few percent, at most, of the United States supply will ever come from this source"

New Buildup Of Inventories Likely in U.S.

By Edwin L. Dale Jr. WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (NYT). -Manufacturers' inventories were essentially nuchanged in November, continuing a sluggishness that lasted through most of 1971 the Commerce Department reported today.

With sales, or shipments, show ing a strong growth, the impor-tant ratio of inventories to sales showed a sharp drop, from 1.75 in October to 1.70 in November, In November of 1970, this ratio they said. For 1971, 3 percent real growth was achieved. The prediction came yesterday from the economic forum, which was making its 25th annual fore-nonprofit business-research or-ganization. The forum also predicted that consumer prices will rise 3 per-cent during 1972, down from 4.6 percent in 1971, while wholesale prices are projected to increase 24 percent against 34 percent. It predicted an average unemploy-ment rate of 54 percent in 1972 against an estimated 5.9 percent

Conference Board chairman Martin R. Gainsbrugh noted some problem areas and said the Nixon economic program of controls has "suppressed pressures rather than removed or relieved them."

 Consumer spending should rise 9 percent (only 3 percent of this representing price rises). • Capital spending to increase 7.5 percent between the fourth retrigger inflationary pressures. Defense spending to rise by several billion dollars over the estimated $72 billion in 1971, most of this reflecting military pay

To Some Profit-Taking

By Vartanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (NYT).— The New York Stock Exchange opened its new year today with a opened is new year today with a slight hangover. Glamour issues in particular were clipped by profit-taking after their sharp gains since Thanksgiving.

It remained, on the whole, a rather quiet and subdued market at the outset of 1972—a year that most Wall Street analysts expect to produce gains in stock prices. For the second session in a row not a single issue among the 30 Dow Jooes industrials changed by as much as a point, either up or down. The Dow average started off on the right foot. It was ahead by nearly 4 at 10:30 a.m. and, after that, spent the rest of the session backtracking. It wound up with a token loss of 0.9 at 889.30.

Levitz Strong Levitz Furniture, whose warehouse retail concept of merchandising made it a big matket winner last year, started off 1972 with a bang. It rose 3 1/3 to 121 7/8 after trading at a record price of 123 1/2.

The low for Levitz last year was 33 5/3. In 1969 its low was 9 3/8. The company's fiscal year ends Jan. 31. At least one institutional research firm has been recommending Levits to clients on the rationale that the company will continue to register sharp earnings gains,

But the glamour stock losers were more numerous than the winners today. Natomas tumbled 4 1.8 to 65 7/8 as the biggest point decliner on the active list. Federal National Mortgage eased 1 1/8 to 97 1/8 after equaling its previous record price at 100. The company, whose stock has benefited from recent declines in interest rates, is planning a 4for-1 split. Also losing 1 1/8—and also appearing with Fannie Mae on the active roster—was Winnebago

Industries, which closed at 473.8. Winnebago had a combination stock offering of 1.25 million shares last week. Other declines among the glamour group included Bausch & Lomb, down 3 1/4 to 173 3/4; Xerox, off 2 1/2 to 122 3/4; Itek down 2 to 38 1/2; Kresge, off 2 3/8 to 97 5/8; Honeywell, off

7/8 to 130 1/2, and International Business Machines, down 3 1/2 to 333. Gold issues moved higher. Brokers said that increased bullion prices in London were a factor. Campbell Red Lake Mines rose 2 to 22 3/4 American-South African Investment also gained 2 to 36. Volume, perhaps reflecting the absence of year-end, tax-loss selling, fell to 12.57 million shares from Friday's turnover of 14.04 million shares. The daily average last year was 15.38 million shares. On the American Exchange, stocks ended the session with a gain in moderate trading. The exchange index closed at 25.61. up .02. Advancing issues led declines 559 to 403, with 215 issues unchanged. The bond market drifted on light activity, with corporates closing 1/4 point lower and gov-ernment intermediates off 2/32 to 10/32.

LET HISTORY JUDGE

The Origins and Consequences of Stalinism

other means. Conservative Western historians of the Soviet Union argue that Comm leads inevitably to a "totalitarian" state, out to rule the world. They use the history of Stalinism to justify the huge defensive apparatus of the cold war. Western revisionists use the history of Stalinism as an example of the inevitable consequences of ag-gressive capitalism, whose imperialism created a siege mentality in the Soviet Union. Most orthodox Soviet historians still maintain that the history of Stalinism was a necessary stage of sacrifice in the building of Communism. Roy A. Medvedev would confound them all, for in this first major Russian revisionist history to be published outside the Soviet Union he argues not only that Stalin and Stalinism were not inevitable, but also that Stalin was not even a true Communist, and that his errors and repressions seriously retarded the revolution at home and wrecked abroad, robbing it of victories it should have won. Roy A. Medvedev has been bruised by history. He is a philosopher and teacher of pedagogy who joined the party and turned historian after Khrushchev's first anti-Stalin speech in 1956. Based on official and unofficial sources. on memoirs and eyewitness accounts, the book was written between 1961 and 1968. Medveder decided to publish it in the West because he felt it would never see the light of day in its original form in the Soviet Union. (The Russian original laudably, wifl also be published in the United States to prevent any question about its anthenticity, as happened in the case of the Khrushchev reminiscences.) In the meantime Medvedev also published here "A Question of Madness" with his scientist brother, Zhores, in which they dramatically described the latter's fight against psychiatric harassment and its use in the Soviet Union to silence political dissent. The new book, "Let History Judge," is a brief for the prosecution of the present Soviet regime for its refusal to reject absolutely its criminal Stalinist

For Medvedev. Stalin was evil from the start. He titles the first part of his book "Stalin's Usur-pation of Power." Thus without Lenin there would have been no revolution - Stalin elaimed a large role for himself, but was in fact only a minor figure who did not even rate a line in John Reed's contemporary account. Lenin left behind a collective leadership—Stalin methodically cut down the Old Bolsheviks. Medvedev's Lenin was subtle and pragmatic-Stalin was rigid and bound by simplistic abstractions. Lenin was modest and courteous -Stalin was brutally arrogant. Lenin, says Medvedev. wanted constructive debate and institutionalized opposition-Stalin could not tolerate either and centralized ruthlessly.

In pressing his case against Stalin, Medvedev is able to discuss the qualities of Stalin's

DOLITICAL history is war by rivals with a candor and object tivity rarely found in Western accounts of the 29s. While Medvedev in general approves of Stalin's forced industrialization and collectivization, he maintains that the accompanying hardship death and famine could have been avoided but for Stallay stupidity. He names and ridicules the Soviet historians who deepite the evidence that has surfaced in the last 20 years, still peddle the same Stalinist ration alizations of conspiracy.

Why did Stalin wipe out a generation of leaders at all levels when he already had complete control? Out of an insecurity resulting from his measureless ambition and his limited abilties. Medvedev answers, less than convincingly. Why did his people accept terror as a way of life. That takes Medvedev 100 pages and two dozen complex reasons to explain, a task only more volatile in the Soviet Union today than it is in post-Nazi Germany and post-Vichy France

Medvedev biames the religious cult of Stalin, the real fear of Fascism. the hostility of the West, the Communist party monopoly of politics, the scener and the Big Lie, the managed press, the fact that millions were made accomplices, and that many profited from the misfortunes of the victims. There was bewilder ment and a kind of desperate innocence, as Medvedev quotes one writer: "... In those years It was impossible to understand what was happening. You could become an informer, go mad, commit sulcide, but if you wanted to live the most convenient way for an unhappy, distraught, but honor. able person clinging with his last ounce of strength to his place in society-I repeat and will go on repeating a thousand times was to believe ... And there was

The lest decade of proxy war, moon shots and stale belligerence has given us the cliche that Russian and American societies are: becoming more similar than different. That proposition originally meant a similarity in corporate structures, consumer economies at home and orthodox power policies abroad. Medyeder rearns for a future with another in: echo. Perhaps his riskiest explanation of Stalin is that the dictator eliminated the intellectuals and put the country in the hands of a kind of hard-hat, know-nothing lower middle class, the my-country-right-xwrong people who, says Medvedev, will act the revolutionary and then be bought off by a Hitler or Stalin. The most remarkable aspect of his book, apart from the fact that it was published at all is that throughout he contrasts the evils of Stalinism with a quite in special idea of Lenin and Leninism, a Jeffersonian Leninism de centralized, unmanipulative and sweetly reasonable, with an open society accepting dissent and valuing criticism, balancing the good of society with the good of the individual. Sounds familiar.

Shula was wide awake anyway. He had stayed up to watch a televised replay of the Dolphins' 21-0 smashing of the Baltimore Colts yesterday and got only three hours sleep before attending a 7 a.m. mass today. "Mr. Nixon said he didn't get a thance to see the whole game Sunday," Shulk related later at the Dolphin training camp. "He talked technical football and asked me to re-create Dick Anderson's 62-yard interception return." The Mixon-Shula wee-hours conversation lasted about 10 min-utes. The President had also called the Dolphin coach a week earlier to congratulate him on a first-round victory at Kansas City. "I think he said it would be imposible for him to make the Super Bowl in New Orleans."

Midway in the final quarter, the Colts defense for a five-yard touchdown after Griese and Warfield had combined for another long pass for a 50-yard gain.

Meanwhile, the Dolphin defense, although on the field about twice as long as their offensive teamnates anadicated the Colt offense. Without his leading run-ner, Norm Bulsich, and with Tom Matte limited by a knee allment, the 38-year-old John Unitas, who has lived by the pass, died by it. Unitas threw 36 passes and completed 20 for 224 yards, but three were intercepted.

By comparison, Griese, the cool Dolphin quarterback, threw only eight passes. But his four completions produced 158 yards, nearly a 40-yard average. Warfield, alone, accounted for 125 yards with his two receptions that shattered the Colts' renowned zone

The victory asured each Dolphin of a minimum of $16,000 in bours money—$2,500 as AFC champion, plus either $15,000 as the Super Bowl winners, or $7,500 as losers. The Colts were consoled yesterday with $5,500 aptece, a letdown from their Super Bowl riches last year. GAME STATISTICS

Rozelle Says Owners in NFL Pass Lie Tests on Gambling

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (UFD).—Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League disclosed yesterday that he has given its detector tests to club owners in regard to gambling on professional football games but found no wrongdoing. Roselle, who has previously fined and suspended players after they took lie detector tests for gambling, said on a tele-vision interview that the tests established that the owners had not gambled on pro games.

"If an owner were proven guilty of gambling," Rozelle said. according to the league rules, he would be expelled from the Rozelle repeated his opposition to expansion of off-track betting to include all-sports, especially football where wager-ing is considered widespread.

"No amount of money given to the football teams, et cetera, could justify legalizing betting on football games," Rozelle said. "As things stand now you have the states in partnership with the tracks. Would that mean the states could give urinalysis tests and other things like that to athletes?" .Roselle admitted that some pro football players probably taka "greenies" or "pep pills" before games but said the prac-tice is "not widespread."

The most sensational development in the first 39 minutes of play was a two-yard march that produced the first Dallas touchdown. In the 40th minute, San Francisco's Bruce Gossett kicked a 28-yard field goal. Then as the third period telescoped into the fourth. Dallas trudged 80 yards in, 14 plays and Duane Thomas sort of ambled into the end zone. From that point on, the production was distinguished only by the unerring accuracy of San Francisco's John Brodle throwing. The Cowboys and 49ers are probably the clubbiest antagon-ists in professional football. Dick Nolan, the San Francisco coach, was a defensive back for the New York Giants when Tom Landry was the defensive coach, and Nolan worked as Landry'e assistant in Dallas before he got his present job. Still Learning

"Everything I know in foot-ball," he said before the game, I learned from Tom Landry. We play his defense, but so far we don't play it as well." Whereupon the teams went out and proved Nolan correct. Of the Cowboy offense Landry said, "Staubach's scrambling made the difference"—a curious observation considering that Staubach's scrambling bad nothing to do with the first touchdown and precious little with the other.

Though the Cowboys' quarter-back was the team's leading rush-er with gains of 55 yards, be was caught and flattened six times trying to pass. Usually the ogre who descended upon him was Cedrick Ward Hardman, San Francisco's right end.

Art Buchwald

The State of Humor

Americans,

I am happy to report to you today on the State of Humor in the United States, Nineteen seventy-one was a watershed year for humor in this country. The GNL (Gross National Laughter) in America rose by 3.2 percent. Most of this could be attributed to the Good News - Bad News jokes, which picked up in the last quarter of There was a marked drop-off in Polish and Italian jokes, and Buchwald they will probably be recycled and aimed at another ethnic group.

Politically, 1971 was not great year for humor, but you could call it a good year. Spiro Agnew, Martha Mitchell and Henry Kissinger provided 74.3 percent of the political humor, with President Nixon accounting for only 10 percent.

Former President Johnson former Vice-President Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Edward Kennedy were responsible for less than 5 percent of the political

Songs by Manson Will Be Part of New York Play

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (NYT) .-A new play, "22 years," containing two songs by Charles M. Manson, under sentence of death for the murder of Sharon Tate and six other persons, is scheduled to open tomorrow at the Off-Broadway Stage 73, under the sponsorship of Jell Britton in ass tion with the Manhattan Theater Chub, Inc. Mr. Britton's most recent production was "The Me Nobody Knows."

Robert Sickinger, formerly director of Chicago's Hull House Theater, wrote the play. The author said that he developed it from a variety of sources: his own research, courtroom transcripts of the Manson trial, fictional episodes drawn from accounts of various members of the Manson "family" and improvisational exercises by members of the Manbattan Theater Club, a ponprofit performing arts group.

The Manson songs, "Far Far Down Arkansas" and "Garbage Dump," were written before his murder conviction. Mr. Sickinger negotiated for the two songs about a year ago. Manson learned to play the guitar and write songs during the time be spent in prison for other crimes, Mr. Sickinger said.

WASHINGTON,-My fellow Govern and Jackson during tha entire year, though heaven knows their staffs tried. New York was still the biggest joke as far as a city went, and most of the credit for this can go solely to the efforts made by Mayor John Lindsay.

Los Angeles came in second, but no one has laughed at Chicago since the Democratic National Convention

TV football was one of the main sources of family humor, though very few women laughed about it. Howard Cosell became the Comedian of the Year, accounting for an amazing 66.5 percent of the laughs on television, thanks to his two straight men. Don Meredith and Frank Gif-

College students were laughing more in 1971 than in 1970, but youth on the whole contributed very little to the Gross National Laughter factor in the country. Youth was also responsible for cutting down laughter among adults, mainly because it was impossible for grownups to laugh when their children were in the same room.

What do I predict for 1972? Since it is a presidential election year, we can expect an escalation m political humor. Every candidate will be obligated to warm up his audiences with good, homey, self-deprecating jokes which will show what a good guy humor, which comes painfully to every one of the presidential candidates in both parties, could put the country into a humor recession which it may not get out of until 1976.

We can expect a tremendous number of Chinese jokes just before and just after President Nixon's visit to Peking, most of them having to do with the President's laundry.
We can look forward to the same amount of production of Jackie Onassis jokes, wage-price freeze jokes, American dollar jokes and married priest jokes. As for new jokes, we have to wait for President Nixon's Stateof-the-Union message later this

But I am very bullish about humor for 1972, mainly because I feel that if Americans could laugh after what they have been through during the past 12 months, they can laugh at anything, anytime,

German Sport Federation's Trimmy: . . . drive out and walk!

Germans Try to Do Something About Waistlines

By John M. Pearce PRANKFURT (IHT).—The Germans, whose capacity for beer and potatoes is legendary, are trying to do something to reduce the inevitable cost in widened waistlines, poor health and heart

Led by Trimmy, an elfin figure wearing a track suit and a smile and flashing a cheery thumbs-up gesture, legions of them are pickng up long-lost habits of soccer. hiking, swimming, bicycle riding and other sports.

It's all part of the German Sport Federation's Trimm Dich (trim yourself) campaign, a shoestring operation when it began a year and a half ago but now a flourishing, widely known program with dozens of businesses

Twenty percent of German men between the ages of 50 and 60 have heart attacks, the federation said, and 36 percent of the population is overweight. Half the men weigh an average of 11 pounds more than they should. Two-thirds of the people must retire before they reach 65 because of poor health.

Launching

Faced with this sort of problem, the federation launched Trimm Dich in mid-1969. Results are not known yet, but the feder-ation reports its membership inby 678,000 men and women during 1970-the greatest jump in its 20-year history. Eleven million of Germany's 60 million inhabitants are now

Karl Bellmer, chief spokesman for the federation, said that increasing membership is not the main goal of Trimm Dich, and that a too-rapid increase cannot in fact be absorbed. There are other consequences.

The sporting goods industry credited the program with helping its sales when it evaluated its international fair in Cologne. The women's clothing industry reports (without linking it to Trimm Dich) that Germany's women have better figures than they did ten years ago. Not every woman has reached a desirable 36-24-36, it reported, but the average hips are a half-inch smaller, and busts are a half-inch larger. Trimm Dich, of course, would like to do its part in improving figures, but its major emphasis

Dr. Harald Mellerowicz told a Trimm Dich news conference in

Frankfurt some months ago that the cost of illness in Germany insurance, early retirements, lost been rising for decades, and may have reached 30 billion marks. In 1967, he said, citing government figures, 43 percent of all deaths were attributable to heart disease. "Everyone," he said, "can do much to keep his heart

In an effort to provide more opportunity for exercising the sport federation has tried to get employers to agree that their employees can exercise .. during. their work breaks.

Play

"We say," said Mr. Bellmer, "that everyone who has a chance during his work breaks to eat or smoke should be able to play football." About 50 companies have so far agreed and they pro-vide space for soccer and other sports. But other companies that have no objection to the program aren't convinced they should pay for the play areas. Next year the federation will change the emphasis of its advertising, which is donated newspapers, magazines and the state radio and television stations and augmented with brochures, placards and matchbooks paid for by the corporations.

Instead of just urging people to hike, swim, play soccer, skip rope or ride their bicycles again, the campaign will concentrate on their free time-weekends, holidays and vacations.

Exercise shouldn't be done only said, "it should be pleasant and fun."

Original plans were to continue Trimm Dich until the end of 1973, but it is going well now and Mr. Bellmer thinks it will continue, perhaps under another name.

The physical fitness exponent, known here for years as "Mister Okay," was knocked unconscious last Saturday when he hit the water in his 60-foot dive.

It was his 53d dive from the bridge, and he had said that it would be his last. Doctors in the emergency ward of Rome's San Camillo Hospital given oxygen through an incision in the throat. Both his arms were paralyzed.
